MALNUTRITION AND DEHYDRATION

What are the Risk Factors and How do we Keep Our Residents Safe?

Malnutrition and dehydration, caused by a lack of proper nutrition and fluids, can lead to infections, confusion and muscle weakness. These symptoms can result in immobility, falls, pressure ulcers, pneumonia and a weak immune system.

Evidence shows that malnutrition and dehydration contribute to avoidable harm to the people that we care for. It is our duty to provide well-balanced and palatable meals to residents that deliver adequate amounts of vitamins, minerals, proteins and calories. This is a challenge and encompasses

the whole spectrum of care, including primary and secondary care, from patients who can eat and drink a normal diet to those the need complex nutritional support.
